Gina Maisto Smith and Leslie Gomez will be speaking at the University of Vermont Legal Issues in Higher Education Conference. In the aftermath of several high profile examples of serial predation by a college employee, colleges and universities across the country are asking the questions: Could this happen here? And how do we prevent this from occurring again? To answer those questions, Gina and Leslie will explore the myriad ways minors intersect with higher education programs and activities and will assess federal and state laws that impact institutional responsibilities for the protection of children. They will further explore effective policies, procedures and practices related to inventories, background checks, mandatory reporting, supervision, safety protocols, and training. The session will further outline the audits of a self-guided audit to inform effective policies, procedures, and practices.
