John splits his management side practice between employment litigation and counseling. He represents and advises employers regarding a range of employment and labor law matters including: wage and hour issues; class and representative actions; harassment, discrimination and retaliation claims; trade secret disputes; employee handbooks; leave and accommodation requests; employee discipline and terminations; executive employment agreements; severance agreements, and administrative agency charges.

John earned his bachelor's degree from Vanderbilt University and his law degree from the UCLA School of Law.

Experience

Represented a media services management company in its sale to a digital media distribution and software company. This transaction drew on the experience of the firm's corporate, tax, labor and employment, and employee benefits and executive compensation attorneys.
