Lori Kalani, co-chair of the State Attorneys General practice, will be speaking at a workshop titled "State Attorneys General: Communication & Mitigation Strategies" at SupplySide West, a conference dedicated to the natural products industry, in which state attorneys general (AGs) have taken on increasing prominence in over the past two years. From investigations into product quality to lawsuits brought under unfair and deceptive acts and practices statutes, the industry has been under great scrutiny. Lori and the other panelists will discuss the industry and how AGs are communicating, and what to do to keep your business on the right side of the law. Other topics will include:

- Lessons learned from recent investigations and what is likely coming next.
- What is the breath of AGs' authority and potential to impact industry?
- Recommendations on communicating with the AGs proactively and in response to investigations
