

Family Discord May Break Up a Valuable Art Collection

Tuesday, February 5, 2019

Amanda DiChello discusses a series of lawsuits involving art heiress Belinda Neumann-Donnelly and her family in an article on WealthManagement.com. Neumann-Donnelly's family is disputing the ownership and sale of 60 valuable works of art. Amanda explains the challenges of the lawsuits and suggests that this scenario could be avoided through proper planning. "We should be asking ourselves during the administration process if there's a better way to distribute these types of assets," Amanda said.

To read the full article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Private Client Services